iGizmo

In 1950, Isaac Asimov wrote I, Robot; 54 years later, the adaptation of his novel became a Hollywood blockbuster. But why was this, and what has this got to do with iGizmo, the latest digital gadget magazine, from Dennis?

Humankind has long been fascinated with the future. Since the turn of the 20th century, when asked about their view of the future, most people respond with what they think the technology will be like. Gadgets and new technologies offer a window into the future, which is where iGizmo steps in.

It is one of those things that makes you wonder why it hasn't been done before. Let's look at the facts: men love gadgets and like to be knowledgeable about the latest technology. Using the intuitive Ceros platform, iGizmo is able to deliver the latest technology straight to your computer screen, bringing it to life with 360° viewing and 'real' reviews from actual users.

It also offers the choice to dip in for the main pieces of news, or, if you're feeling geeky, then there is plenty of in-depth data to keep you satisfied. Asimov would have loved it.
